Diyas and Sparklers

My name is Asha, and I am seven. On Diwali, my family lights diyas and sparklers. This story is about how we stay safe.

Getting Ready

Before the lights, I tie back my long braids. I wear my cotton clothes and my closed shoes.

The Diyas

A grown-up lights the diyas. I stand one big step back from the tiny flames.

A Safe Place for Diyas

Nani puts the diyas on the step and the wall, away from curtains and paper. A grown-up stays near while the diyas glow.

The Bucket and the Gloves

Outside, Nani fills a bucket with water and puts it by the path. I put on my gloves.

My Sparkler

A grown-up lights my sparkler. I hold it out with my arm straight, far from my face. I hold one sparkler at a time.

Glow Sticks

Sparklers are for bigger children. My little cousin is three, so she waves a glow stick. Jai likes his glow stick too.

Into the Bucket

When my sparkler goes out, I put it in the bucket of water. The wire stays hot for a while, so I do not touch it.

Please Stand Back

Many children feel excited by the sparkles. That is okay. I can try saying, "Please stand back," if a friend comes close.

Safe and Happy

The diyas glow, and the sparklers fizz. My family stays safe and happy together on Diwali.
