Being a Kind Neighbour on Diwali

Our Street

My name is Asha. On Diwali, my family celebrates with our neighbours. Our street has many families. Some celebrate Diwali, and some do not.

Sharing Sweets

We share boxes of sweets with our neighbours. Mei's family gives us a plate of dumplings. Sharing makes the whole street feel happy.

A New Baby

The family across the road has a new baby. Babies usually go to sleep early. We keep our voices soft near their window.

Quiet Neighbours

Our older neighbour likes quiet evenings. Some pets do not like loud bangs. Many families light diyas and keep the night calm.

An Open Space

When people light crackers, grown-ups usually choose an open space. It is far from houses, pets and parked cars. They stop before it gets late.

Is This a Good Time?

Many children feel excited on Diwali night. That is okay. I can try asking my grown-up, "Is this a good time to play loudly?"

Diwali Visitors

Neighbours visit to see our diyas and the rangoli. Mei's family comes too. Everyone says, "Happy Diwali!"

The Next Morning

The next morning, we help sweep up the paper and the wrappers on our street. Our older neighbour waves and says thank you.

Cared For

Diwali is happiest when everyone on our street feels cared for. Our street looks bright and tidy again.
