The Turtle Who Carried the Carnival

Illustrated story

The Music at the Window

One morning, Bea heard music from the sea—twinkly music, spinning music, the kind that made her little feet go tap-tap-tap.

Balloons Over the Waves

Bea looked out and saw pink balloons, yellow balloons, and tiny lights bobbing over the waves. Then she saw Gondo, the biggest turtle in the whole wide world.

Two Paws Wide

Gondo only stopped for someone who waved with both hands. Bea tried one paw. Nothing. Then she waved both paws big and wide, and Gondo smiled his slow turtle smile.

The Carnival Comes Ashore

Gondo arrived so gently that not one balloon blew away. Bea rode the spinning wheel, tasted warm popcorn, and heard a tiny sound making a bright little path for a friend.

Tap-Tap All the Way Home

Bea patted Gondo’s warm shell and said, “Thank you.” The little friend tucked the tiny glowing clue into the basket by the window, and Bea’s feet went tap-tap-tap all the way home.
